S. S. CONVENTION.

Last week Rev. W. A. Smith and myself attended two conventions in Edmonton. The Epworth League Convention on Tuesday and Wednesday October 26th and 27th and the Alberta Sunday School Convention on Thursday and Friday 28th and 29th and both were very profitable and of great interest.

Mr. Smith was on the program to speak on Tuesday evening and delivered an excellent address. Rev. J. H. Johnston, our former pastor, is the secretary of the league.

On Wednesday evening the ladies of the Edmonton churches served tea to all the delegates in the Thistle Rink. After tea the Mayor of the city and two or three others delivered short addresses of welcome to the city and Dr. Scott, of Calgary, responded in behalf of the delegates.

The real work of the Sunday School Convention began on Thursday morning. The singing was led by Prof. Excell, from Chicago, and one must witness it to realise the magnetism of that man's personality, what inspiration and enthusiasm he could put into his audience, and with what ease he could draw out the last spark of music there was in their souls.

While we had many papers, addresses and discussions on subjects pertaining to Sunday School work by some of the best workers in the province, yet the address of Marion Lawrence, of Chicago, was the great feature of the whole thing. Marion Lawrence is the General Secretary of the Sunday School Association of the American continent and as a Sunday School worker and speaker on Sunday school subjects it is doubtful if he has a superior in any country. He spoke on Thursday morning in the First Presbyterian church on the "Sunday School Teacher Teaching." After luncheon in the Thistle Rink he addressed about 500 business men on the Sunday school as an investment. The Premier and Lieutenant Governor were present one of them moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Lawrence and the other seconded it.

The evening meetings were held in the Rink being the largest room in the city and about 4000 people crowded in to hear Mr. Lawrence speak and the singing under Prof. Excell was also a great attraction. He had a choir of 500 school children on the platform who sang beautifully. Sometimes they, with their sweet voices, would sing the verse then the great congregation would thunder in on the chorus.

A collection taken in the meeting to meet the expenses of the Convention, amounted to $460 and on Friday night $150 more was raised.

The kind hospitality of the people of Edmonton who entertained the delegates, helped much to make that Convention a Red Letter Day in the experience of those who had the privilege of attending it.

Next year the convention will be held in Calgary.

MUST SPEND MONEY.

The Cranbrook Herald very truly says: "It is impossible to make a town unless you spend money," and it reasons this way:

Take the business men of Cranbrook to-day. With the exception of two or three they were virtually without a dollar ten or eleven years ago. In other words they started in business in Cranbrook on a shoe string, as the phrase is known in the west to-day. Look at them now. There is not a more prosperous or a more wealthy class of business men in Western Canada than those in Cranbrook to-day.
They had to go in debt to secure prosperity. All of us had to do that. Why then should not a city go after prosperity by following the same policy?

To establish its contention it quotes Lethbridge. It says:

A few years ago the people of Lethbridge elected William Henderson, proprietor of the Lethbridge hotel, mayor of the city, and he proceeded at once to borrow money, build cement sidewalks and otherwise improve that town. The people kicked, as people will, but Henderson kept on working and spending money. The town got the benefit and at the end of his term, while Mr. Henderson was absent in the Old Country, he was renominated and elected by acclamation. Why? Because he was a man of the period and went ahead to improve his town regardless of kicks or protests. A pinhead is no good for any town in the west. It takes money to make a town and it takes brains to push things along.

Something New

It is for you Laboring Man, Business Man or Capitalist?

If you are a laboring man you want to better your condition and provide for time of need, sickness or old age. You, business man, want to make money faster than you do now? Of course you do. We all like to get hold of the dollars and pile them up faster, and though you, capitalist, have abundance of this World's treasure, still you want to see your money make more money for you.

It is the Law of Nature born in man. The more we have the more we want, and it is quite right too, to make all you can if you make it honestly.

Now here is our "New Plan" we are selling mining stock, nothing new in that; well, don't stop, read on and see. We are selling Mining Stock of a company that has its holdings in one of the richest districts in America and therefore if you buy its stock you stand a chance to make a fortune. You know many fortunes were made in the past and many more will be made in future, in mining. But you say many invested and lost! It is true, but here is a proposition in which you have all the chances to make the big profit, and besides your original investment is guaranteed so that you can't lose the money you invest.

Here Is Where Our New Plan Comes In

Your INVESTMENT is positively GUARANTEED, not by the Company, but by an INDEPENDENT, REPUTABLE, CANADIAN TRUST COMPANY.
This Trust Company will give you a written guarantee, that, if this Company fails to pay you 100 per cent. on your investment in a specified length of time, the Trust Company will pay back to you every dollar you invested and besides you keep the stock and dividends you received in the meantime. Think of it, what this means to the investor.

When a Mining Company has such a safe proposition to offer that an Independent Trust Company is willing to guarantee your investment, so if the Mining Company fails to make good, they will pay your money back out of their treasury. We sell this stock with the Trust Company's guarantee, at 50c. per share, par value $1.00 as long as our present allotment lasts.

Write without delay for further information, or better still send in your subscription for as much of this stock as you want, for this stock is going fast, and, as soon as this allotment is sold, we will raise the price to $1.00 per share.

MALCOLM KIRK

A Tale of Moral Heroism
Overcoming the World.By CHARLES M. SHELTON, Author of "In His Steps," "Crucifixion of Philip the Apostle," "Robert Raby's Seven Days."

Copyright, 1920, by the Advance Publishing Co.

Dorothy spread the sketch out on the table and looked at it. Raleigh had not said too much when he wrote that he had caught Kirk's attitude very well. It was, indeed, a splendid likeness. There was just a little exaggeration to the stubborn brown hair, a little touch of unnecessary seriousness to the face, but it was "Malcolm Kirk plain enough," as he used to say of himself. The baby lay in his arms satisfied and smiling. How he loved all that Dorothy's eyes after she had looked a little while. Malcolm Kirk's great hearted love of humanity as it was represented by that helpless bit of life in his long arms somehow appealed to her. She seemed to feel as if there was a world there into which she had never entered, but which she could enjoy with all her eager enthusiasm if once she were introduced to it. She folded up the sketch and carefully laid it away by itself. She did not put it with a collection of drawings which Raleigh had given her when he finished his course in art.

Malcolm Kirk went over on the continent and spent the year in France, Italy, Germany and even two weeks in Russia. How he lived all that time would make a story in itself. He waited a great deal. Always lodged in the most expensive hotels, and months after he had been away from home he sent to the president of the university a written report of what he had been doing. It was not until many years that the president above it to Mr. Gilbert. The Boston publisher urged its publication. The president wrote that the university would assume the expense of publication, and Mr. Gilbert's house printed the report in a neat pamphlet that at once attracted attention.

The night of the first issue of the pamphlet Mr. Gilbert brought a copy of it home.

"By the way, Dorothy, you remember that theologian who took the God man scholarship, didn't he?"

"Yes," murmured Dorothy demurely. If Dorothy's mother had been living, it is possible she might have told her about Kirk's declaration that there was another person. Besides, he had not asked her to be his wife. He had only told her very bluntly that he loved her. That was in one sense his secret to keep for him from others.

"Well, here's a bit of work he's been abroad. You brought it out today. Knowing you have always been interested in this work, I thought you might like to look this over."

Her father spoke in a usual precise calmness and left the pamphlet on the table. The moment supper was over Dorothy seized the report and went to her own room.

She read it through as if it had been a fascinating novel. It was written in a simple style that was not a quest except its simplicity, but it was a record of how humanity lived, and the pathos, the reality, the fact of how it lived, stirred Dorothy's soul as no mind and heart had never been stirred. And all through the reading she seemed to see Malcolm Kirk with that baby in his arms. She knew that if that sketch had been put in as a frontispiece it would have exactly expressed the contents of the pamphlet. She rose and walked her room strangely excited. Who was this man to stir her feelings so deeply? Francis Raleigh had never been able to do it. No man, for that matter. All the other men she knew were busy trying to have a good time or win favor or make money. This man was interested in people. He wanted the world to know and feel for humanity. He was unlike the others. Besides he loved her. He loved her picture. She gazed at the thought. For the first time in her life she trembled at the thought of being loved.

A few days later she read the report again. People in Herman were talking about it. It had actually stirred the life of the village. Dorothy's picture placed the sketch of Kirk in the pamphlet and put them away in her desk. Malcolm Kirk finished his year and took passage on one of the French steamers for New York. He had used his money well, but he had so little at the end of the year that he took steerage passage. That was one degree lower than the intermediate, and he smiled a little grimly to himself as he more than a year now. He was under French pennants and a colony of Marseilles emigrants. However, it was literally true that he loved people regardless of their condition, and to many a simple, ignorant soul in the steerage the American clergyman who somehow was strangely there became during the nine days' voyage a friend and companion from whom they parted with real regret and with loving memory.

He started at once for Herman. He would have nearly two weeks there to write out his report for the seminary. Then for his Home Missionary field in Kansas. And Dorothy Gilbert? He had not heard except indirectly anything of her. Once in Berlin he had chatted with one of the Herman professors who was taking his vacation.

"Excuse me for not shaking hands. Mine are full just now."

tion. From him he had learned that the Gilberts had been spending the summer at the home of Dorothy's aunt in Beverly and were expected home early in the fall. He wondered if he should see her before he was obliged to go west. The superintendent had written him that the church would be in question and he would be obliged to give it back. Would he? But what possible alternative could there be? He still loved Dorothy Gilbert. Somehow he felt as if she would be a part of his future as he had been of his past.

He reached Boston in the morning and took the first train for Herman. He bought a paper as he entered the train, and as it was moving out of the station he began to read. Among the first items that caught his eye was this:

"The publishing firm of Sydney, Gilbert & Co. assigned yesterday. The company was involved in the recent speculative failure in the book business. Mr. Gilbert's loss is heavy. It is thought he saved little if anything from the failure."

He reached Herman and went at once to the president's house. The president had not come home from his vacation, but was expected the next day. He was expected the next day. He was expected the next day. He was expected the next day.

He reached Herman and went at once to the president's house. The president had not come home from his vacation, but was expected the next day. He was expected the next day. He was expected the next day. He was expected the next day.

He reached Herman and went at once to the president's house. The president had not come home from his vacation, but was expected the next day. He was expected the next day. He was expected the next day. He was expected the next day.

CHAPTER V.

MALCOLM ATTEMPTS TO RETURN THE MINT.

The next day Malcolm Kirk doggedly set to work on his report. In the evening he went over to see the president and consulted with him to obtain details, and then for the next three days he gave himself up to his task of getting together the great mass of material he had accumulated while abroad.

It was the fourth evening of his report that he saw the lights in the Gilbert house across the campus as evening set in. The house had been shut up and dark.

"She is home again," was his first thought. He was unable to work well that evening. The next day he continued, but the evident nervousness of Dorothy made him restless to see her. Once she came out on the porch, and he readily recognized her even at that distance.

That evening he did not pretend to himself that he could do anything worth doing on his report and resorted to go and return the miniature without waiting any longer. He had kept it more than a year now. He was under promise to give it back. As well now as any time.

He rang the bell with a tremor at heart that instantly brought out to her when Dorothy herself opened the door.

He stood there in the light of the porch, his face repudiated did not blinder his observing that Dorothy looked very pale and even as if she had been crying.

"Won't you come in Mr. Kirk? I am very glad to see you," said Dorothy.

She spoke so easily, so kindly, that he recovered his self-possession at once and went into the parlor and sat down, wondering at the commonplace details of his meeting with the one woman in all the world to him.

"You will excuse me for coming so soon after your return?" he said simply.

"Certainly," replied Dorothy, smiling. "Would you like to see father?"

"No," said Malcolm Kirk. "I came to see you." It was so evidently true that Dorothy could say nothing for a moment. There was an awkward silence. She broke it by saying:

"I have saved your miniature describing the life of the people on the continent in the cities. I thank you, not for the pleasure, but for the pain it gave me."

He looked at her gratefully. He understood exactly what she meant. The opening had been made for talk along the lines of his deepest life, and before he knew just how it had been brought about he was telling her some of the experiences of his best and best things he had told to no one else and had not even been able to put into his report. All the time he felt the miniature in his pocket.

As for Dorothy, she experienced a feeling of exhilaration in her talk with this man. She was sick of the empty nothings she had been hearing all summer. The recent experience of her father's failure also had excited her. There was much in everything that pervaded Malcolm Kirk's life work to interest her.

It must have been nearly an hour that they had been talking, each asking questions and each answering, and every minute grew increasingly full of interest to her, when he suddenly stopped as he had done that evening a year before and said: "Would you do you feel as if you could play something?"

He was simply talking for time, and he was in a condition where he could not run the risk of speaking something he ought not. The longer he staid the deeper he knew his heart longed for Dorothy Gilbert. He felt that that while she was playing he might measure his day and his affection better.

She was never so free to tell herself why she played as she did. She was drawn by the old German legend, "Ich weiss nicht was ich so bedenkend, das ich so trauring bin." ("I know not how it is that I am so sad and then before she could control her fingers or her voice she had run on to the Trauerlied, which Kirk had asked her to play before.

When she finished, she hardly knew her own feelings. When she turned about, he was standing, and he had said: "I promised to return it when I came back." He spoke with great simplicity and, as his fashion always was, looked straight in her face like a man one but himself has seen it. The keeping of it has not been a great thing.

She slowly dared to trust himself to say what lay within his heart. In truth he knew well enough that he was far different from the great mass of rest of his days if he could only have this woman for his wife, but at that moment he felt as if such a possibility was too remote for his thought.

Incompleteness.

Willie is a curious chap.

As people all know.

He never does a thing quite right.

Or what he wants to be.

His little clothes entice him

To an enduring game.

The only difficulty is

He doesn't know the game.

He has a handsome hunting rig.

But is afraid to shoot.

He only needs a sporting car.

But he has no auto.

With his wardrobe going, he says.

To his confidence sublime:

"Be not inquisitive, my clothes."

The rest will come in time."

The Ethel.

I sought to gaze into Ethel's eyes.

But quick she dropped her eyelids.

I could not take her by surprise.

Indeed, and they were very lids.

I sought to whisper words of love.

But caused the maid to tremble.

She was so timid, and so shy.

Or did she just dissemble?

I learned too late it was an art.

That drooping of the eyelids.

In dressing she had a secret.

A snare was in those very lids.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xxviii, 23, to xxviii, 30.—Memory Verses, xxviii, 3, 10.—Golden Text, Ps. xxviii, 22.—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

One night as they took soundings they found the depth of water growing less, and, fearing lest they should be cast upon the rocks, they cast four anchors out of the stern and layed for the morning. As the sailors were about to make off with the boat under cover of darkness, the centurion of the forebore Paul said to the centurion and to the soldiers, "Except these abide in the ship ye cannot be saved."

Whereupon they said that he had assured them that all would be saved? So we learn that, while God is not to be deceived, he will not be deceived. He desires all to be saved. He, having provided a way, says that if men will not accept His way they must perish.

They found themselves on the island of Malta, in a time of much rain, and the people of the island showed them great kindness and kindled a fire and welcomed them to their houses.

It was simply talking for time, and he was in a condition where he could not run the risk of speaking something he ought not. The longer he staid the deeper he knew his heart longed for Dorothy Gilbert. He felt that that while she was playing he might measure his day and his affection better.

many honors and. Inden with such things as they need. This must have been real gratitude to God and to His son Jesus Christ, and to those who had brought the good news to them. For about thirty years I have seen much of this attitude from some thousands of people who have had presented to them in the simplest possible way the great truths of salvation and the kingdom, and in its midst and on the 29th years I have seen that gratitude in the substantial form of over $400,000 for missions to spread the gospel. All glory to Him!

Palmer Rapids, Ont. (Special).—The thousands of Canadians who live in daily terror of those terrible forms of Kidney Disease known as Backache, Gravel and Rheumatism, must be deeply interested in the story of Mrs. Fred Krieger, of this place.

After suffering for years to suffer from Kidney Disease, Gravel, Rheumatism and Backache, Mrs. Krieger states that she started through a cold, but I got so my head ached, I was nervous, my limbs were heavy, I had a dragging sensation across my joints, and I was totally unfit to do anything. Reading about wonderful cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills today I am completely cured. Dodd's Kidney Pills gave me health and I feel like a new man.

Mr. Chisholm Sells 800 Acres
At $25 an Acre.

A big land sale has taken place near Airdrie, by which 800 acres of fine land near town becomes the property of Mr. Meldrum, who came from Idaho. We learn that the price paid was $20,000—$25 an acre. Mr. Chisholm, whose place Mr. Meldrum has bought, intends to take a trip East after which he will go out to his land in Yankee Valley and work that. While we regret to see Mr. Chisholm go further from town, yet we must congratulate him on making a good sale. Congratulations are also due to Mr. Meldrum on his success in securing such a valuable farm property and though the price paid appears large, yet within a very few years the value of this land will be even double what it is to-day.

HARVEST. CONCERT.

The Harvest Thanksgiving services of the Methodist Church in Airdrie were held on Sunday and Monday. The concert on Monday night was remarkably well attended and a splendid programme was provided. We regret to be unable to give a lengthy report, but must say that the local talent provided could not be surpassed in many far larger towns. Mr. Hallinan who occupied the chair referred to the wonderful progress of the country during the last four years and also to the progress made by the church in the same time.

The programme rendered was as follows:—
